

Carnivora Dinarica

“The project has reached the national and international general public through substantial media coverage.”

DESCRIPTION

Slovenia and Croatia share important populations of Eurasian lynx, wolf and brown bear, as their key habitats are the Dinaric forests of the transboundary region.

It marks a departure from previous projects because it is addressing issues of agricultural damage to better understand the threats to these habitats – aiming for harmonious coexistence between the humans and the animals.

The project has received considerable public attention, with the public and expert communities keen to follow its progress – households across the project area have received bulletins to give them a sense of involvement in this important work.
